My Short Video on Taiwanese Culture

If I am going to shoot a short video about Taiwanese culture, the flying lanterns will be my theme. I choose it not only because I am a person who favor the image of flying lanterns very much, but also because I want to have the audience, who are mostly foreigners, get acquainted with the splendid scenery of flying lanterns, and encourage them to come to Taiwan and give it a try.

The video will start with a girl named Nancy. Nancy was an exchanged student from HongKong. She loved to experience Taiwanese culture in her leisure time. Therefore, she had visited many classic attractions in Taiwan, such as SunMoon Lake, Taipei 101, Mountain A-li, and so on. Among these attractions, Pingxi was her favorite, for the flying lanterns brought her hope and joy. As a result, even though she had been there several times, Pingxi was still a spot appealing to her.

One day, Nancy got a call from her father. In the conversation, Nancy's father told Nancy that he was diagnosed with cancer, and the doctor also informed that he might leave the world soonly. Hearing the news, Nancy was depressed; however, a thought abruptly occurred to Nancy — "There is no use in feeling upset. I have to seize the chance to accompany him and delight him". Meanwhile, the scene of flying lanterns slowly flying up to the sky occurred to Nancy as well. "I want to bring my loved Daddy to Pingxi!", she thought. She ordered her father a ticket right away and told him about the trip. Nancy's father was delighted to know it and also looking forward to the trip. In the end, Nancy and her father sat together, watching lanterns flying up to the sky. In spite of the fact that they were all aware of the limited span of Nancy's father, at the moment, there were only happiness and satisfaction existing.
